In Memoriam, Jeffrey D. Triblehorn 1970-2021

Jeff was a dedicated teacher, respected scholar, and dear friend to many.

Jeff was a fundamentally honest and down-to-earth gentleman who had deep commitments to his students, colleagues, friends, and family. We will all especially miss Jeff's quick sardonic wit and his irreverent humor.

His students will remember his knack for telling quirky jokes in the classroom, his dedication to the College of Charleston neuroscience program, his commitment to undergraduate research, and his encouragement as they pursued interesting and fulfilling careers after leaving the College.

Jeff’s colleagues at the College of Charleston and elsewhere will remember Jeff's collaborative nature, his strong work ethic, his careful attention to detail, and the creativity of his scholarship. Jeff used insects, particularly cockroaches and mantises, to advance our knowledge of the fundamental aspects of neuroscience and biology.
